(Case Study)

Compulsory question :

(1×15=15)

Read the following case and answer the questions given at the end.

12. Emotions are an inevitable part of people's behaviour at work. At the same time, it's not entirely clear that we've reached a point where people feel comfortable expressing all emotions at work. The reason might be that business culture and etiquette remain poorly suited to handling overt emotional displays.

Some people are skeptical about the virtues of more emotional displays at the workplace. As emotions are automatic physiological responses to the environment and as such, they can be difficult to control appropriately. One 22 year old customer service representative named Laura who was the subject of a case study noted that fear and anger were routinely used as methods to control employees, and employees deeply resented this use of emotion.

asset. Management consultant Erika Anderson notes, “Crying at work is transformative and can open the door to change”. The question then is, can organizations take specific steps to become better at allowing emotional displays without opening a Pandora’s Box of outbursts ?

Questions :

- 1) What factors do you think make some organizations ineffective at managing emotions ?
 - 2) Do you think the strategic use and display of emotions serve to protect employees, or does covering your true emotions at work lead to more problems than it solves ?
 - 3) Have you ever worked where emotions were used as part of a management style ? Describe the advantages and disadvantages of this approach in your experience.
