12. CASE STUDY : (Compulsory question) (1×15=15)

Surya International Corporation implemented a new performance management system six months ago. The system includes quarterly performance reviews and goal setting. However, several issues have arisen. Many employees complain that the new system is time-consuming and bureaucratic, taking them away from their core tasks. Managers struggle to provide effective feedback and set clear performance expectations for their teams. There's a lack of alignment between individual goals and company objectives. Employees perceive that the system is biased and does not recognize their individual contributions accurately. The company has seen an increase in voluntary turnover, especially among high-performing employees who claim they are dissatisfied with the performance management process. The HR department is tasked with addressing these issues.

Questions:

- a) What are the common challenges faced by employees in the organization regarding the new performance management system?
 - b) What impact has the performance management system on employee turnover?
